FileServer is a simple file-sharing server program that allows your local area network (LAN) to be made available for remote and share over the Internet. FileServer is easy to use and is very lightweight! FileServer can serve files to other computers (servers) running Windows 98/Me/2000/XP. It is especially useful for sharing a printer over a LAN. It can even be used as a base for a secure networked shared printer. A great way to keep an always updated home directory is to have your computer get its own copy of the Internet, and then you can just do updates to your home directory when you need to. This can be as simple as getting a free domain and then using a DNS server like dnsmasq. This is one of the easiest ways to have a home directory and store your files on a networked computer. FileServer Features: FileServer is a lightweight standalone server program that runs on your Windows computer without the need for third party applications. It can serve up to 16,000 files. Share files to other computers (servers) running Windows 98/Me/2000/XP. You can also view files shared from other computers. The program allows you to browse remote files and folders. Remote files are available from any computer on the network. Allow remote computers to print to your printer (Windows only). This is a secure way to share a printer. Remote computers can access your calendar and contacts and view your mailbox. When a remote computer logs on to your server, a user-friendly console interface is displayed. Up to 16,000 files can be shared. A convenient graphic display allows you to easily find the files you want to share. Display the name of the file shared in the folder Runs on Windows 98/Me/2000/XP. Win Sharer is a powerful File Server. It allows you to share folders, printers, and other devices to remote computers. It can also help you to set up server on your computer, and provide an easy and comfortable way to share your files, music, movies, and other contents to everyone on the Internet. This is a simple and fast File Sharing Server to share your files with your friends. Win Sharer Description: Share files, folders, printers and other devices to remote computers with ease!
