SELECT id FROM table1 ORDER BY id DESC LIMIT 1 After 2 years this table has grown to 500mb with 250k unique ids (50% are deleted every 10 minutes) So its taking about 30 seconds to run the query. I'm wondering if there is a way to optimize this? A: No need for the ORDER BY. You can get the same output by just using a less efficient approach, like: SELECT TOP 1 * FROM table1 The optimizer should optimize it to fetch just one row, regardless of the size of the result set. To speed things up further, you can use an index: CREATE INDEX idx_table1_id ON table1(id) This should speed up inserts/updates, since the optimizer is likely to consider them to be just 1 row at a time (i.e. bff6bb2d33
