To find out more about this game visit: ENJOY, THX {PS4 Product Code} {This feature is not available on PlayStation 5} “I haven’t actually measured it, but I’d guess about 5 to 10 percent of the 9,000 hours that I have logged so far in med school have been spent on the clinically necessary hours of work,” Montel N. Coleman said, talking to the crowd in the packed Ballroom K of the Royal San Jose Civic Auditorium. “What I’m trying to say is that as you look at your typical four-year medical degree, we’re trying to fit in as many hours of stuff as we can as we get through school.” While the clock ticks, medical students and residents are constantly hustling from report to report, meeting to meet, and class to class. The profession is busy, but with no shortage of opportunities to become well-rounded—and well-compensated—medics. In this segment of Stanford Medicine’s Academy of Medicine, we look at some of the major stumbling blocks in medicine, the milestones that medical students must pass before they feel like “real” physicians, and what to do with your downtime. 1. Clinical competency The American Association of Medical Colleges (AAMC) defines “competency” as “the ability to perform or apply knowledge, skills, and abilities to carry out clinical or other practice-related tasks.” The first two years of medical school consist of general education courses such as biology, physics, and chemistry, pre-requisite courses in anatomy and physiology, and core courses meant to prepare the students to function as future physicians. Clinical rotations occur every third week, for one or two shifts. The entire year is then followed by a one-month rotation of internal medicine and then one month of surgery, pediatrics and internal medicine rotation. By the end of the first year, medical students have fulfilled all the requirements to be awarded the Medical College Admission Test (MCAT). This test is, in effect, the graduate equivalent of medical school’s pre-requisite courses. Because their scores are separate from their undergraduate academic scores, students must do well on

By RansomWagn75 Watch 150 Favourites 15 Comments 3K Views "In the world of Ravnica, a world haunted by nightmares come to life, some heroes must bravely step into the darkest dungeons. It is said that the depths can reveal to those with courage what the light dare not. Perhaps there is a way for you to know the truth of the depths." "It was the summer of 783 and the Chamber of Wishes was going down. Massive drips of water landed in the small well as the previous year's wishes dwindled. Izor was killed by a sea dragon the previous year. It was a tragic loss for his team. He was a good paladin. He played well too." Gortho was saying about the previous chamber. "Why did you say his wish died? The last wish of the previous year was to capture a sea dragon and bring it back alive. It was poor etiquette but tradition." Gortho was in a good mood that day. Gortho was a good paladin. IMAGE DETAILS

`converted_time= datetime.strptime(str_col, "YYYY-MM-DD'T'HH:MM:SS.000'Z'")` However, if the string has a timezone, for example my input is `2014-08-19T23:58:00.000-06:00` then the above code doesn't work. For my project, we need to do with one format only so my question is how do I check if the timezone part has a value or not? A: To check if a string contains Tz you can split it by T: for index, value in `enumerate(str_col.split("T"))`: if value == "Z": break else: # Doesn't contain Timezone and already in yyyy

Parasites take over planets, and it's up to you to protect them or to exterminate them. Your ships are the only choice you have to defend your homes from these interstellar predators. They need hosts with the right genetic mix to ensure their survival. Which ones of your races would you choose to give them a home? Expand and conquer - the parasites have gone too far and now they are looking for new hosts. In just 198 years of evolution they have transformed from parasitic larvae, into the most powerful race in the galaxy. They are looking for a new host, and your opponents are humans. They have selected the most sumptuous specimens from the population, and now they are venturing forth from their adopted home planet and in search of a cognate species which breeds freely and is able to give birth at least once per year, with a good growth rate and preferably (although a bit of crunch is acceptable) without an exoskeleton. Based on the original PlayStation game. The game is entirely new, but shares no code with the original game. It is the first game from Easycombat Systems and was released on March 24 2012. Detailed Features - 10 new ships in 4 Cruisers, 3 Frigates and 3 fighters. 4 Cruiser bonuses, 3 Frigate bonuses and 3 fighter bonuses. - New ship equipment: The flak cannon is a cruiser weapon designed to target enemy fighter swarms. The cannon has an 'area-of-effect' damage as well as hitting the target ship. The Plasma slinger is a small but ultra-high-rate-of-fire plasma torpedo weapon. This is the first plasma weapon that can have multiple torpedoes in flight at the same time. The missile revenge scrambler is a whole new type of ECM weapon that actually sends missile back to attack the ship that launched them, rather than just scrambling their guidance systems. - New ship bonuses: The parasites build these ships to last. Most of the new hulls have both integrity and armor bonuses. The parasites aren't so good on the shields front, but they make up for it with stronger armor. - 1 New Scenario. One new map for you to fight against the parasites, and to use in online challenges. Inventory of ships: - 4 Cruiser bonuses: Medium vessel speed, light missiles, medium torpedos, high missile upgrades. - 3 Frigate bonuses: Medium vessel speed, high missiles, high torpedos. - 3 fighter bonuses: Medium
